Thrust Moves Deeper

SAIGON (AP) — A South Vietnamese armored task force pushed 24 miles into Cambodia today, occupied one town from which the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese drove the Cambodian army earlier this month, and at dusk was rolling into another.

The large Vietnamese task force did not fire a shot in taking Chipou and entering Prasat, on Highway 1. But another task force thrusting in from another direction encountered heavy enemy resistance early this afternoon.

With U.S. advisers accompanying them and American planes and artillery supporting them, more than 15,000 South Vietnamese troops were pushing across a section of eastern Cambodia in a pincer operation to smash North Vietnamese base camps.

South Vietnamese spokesmen reported 45 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese killed, many of them by American planes.

Two American advisers were wounded, the U.S. Command said. They were the first U.S. ground casualties reported in an offensive operation on Cambodian soil, although other Americans have been wounded in planes that strayed across the border.

Field reports said South Vietnamese casualties so far were 32 killed and 168 wounded, including 55 wounded, their commander said, when U.S. helicopter gunships fired by mistake on a battalion of government troops.

Associated Press correspondent Peter Arnett reported from Chipou that the task force moving into Prasat expected to link up Friday morning with Cambodian troops operating out of Svay Rieng, the provincial capital. But a Cambodian government spokesman in Phnom Penh said the Americans and the South Vietnamese had not informed his government of the invasion, and Cambodian forces were taking no part in the operation.

He told a questioner that since "Cambodia is a neutral country," the Phnom Penh government "does not approve this type of intervention by foreign forces."

The decision to move so deep into Cambodia was not made until 10:30 this morning, the operation commander, Lt. Gen. Do Cao Tri, said. The original targets of the invasion force were Viet Cong and North Vietnamese bases just a few miles inside the border, but Tri said he decided to make a major thrust along Route 1 "so that we could finish the job, neat and tidy."

About 40 of his M48 tanks and armored personnel carriers, loaded with a battalion of Cambodian-born mercenaries led by U.S. Special Forces officers, and other battalions of Vietnamese infantry, moved off down the blacktopped highway at noon.

They had rolled through Chipou by 2:30 p.m. Late in the afternoon the task force commander reported forward elements had entered Prasat, 24 miles from the border, and encountered no resistance.

The Saigon government said earlier its forces had been ordered to return to Vietnam "after the termination of the operation." Tri told newsmen his forces would remain "for many days—we need much time to search the whole area."

He also claimed he had a team in Svay Rieng for liaison with the Cambodian army. As the United States for the first time extended its war to Cambodia, the North Vietnamese scored a new success in Laos and attacked allied forces in the northern provinces of South Vietnam.

North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao troops seized the southernmost Laotian provincial capital of Attapeu, about 25 miles north of the Cambodia border. The move appeared to have more political than military implications since Communist forces had surrounded the town for years.

North Vietnamese troops made three attacks on allied forces in northern South Vietnam and shot down two more American helicopters. Five Americans and 15 North Vietnamese were reported killed and 29 Vietnamese casualties were reported light.

At least 25 American advisers accompanied the four South Vietnamese task forces which pushed into Cambodia west of Saigon Wednesday. Gen. Tri said two Americans were accompanying each of his infantry battalions. He said some of the advisers were there for liaison between the ground forces and the U.S. helicopter gunships supporting the operation.

Single Car Accidents Cause Deaths of Two

A Cape Girardeau man and a Blytheville man were injured fatally in separate one-car highway accidents in the past 24 hours.

In a third one-car accident an eight-year old boy was injured when struck by a car while crossing a county road.

Thomas Haywood Stoops, 26, Cape Girardeau, died when his 1964 Ford went off Highway 55, one and one-half miles north of Scott City, today at 1:30 a.m. The state patrol said Stoops apparently went to sleep. His car went down an embankment, struck a creek bank and overturned throwing the driver from the car.

The body was taken to Ford and Sons Funeral Home in Cape Girardeau.

Woman Convicted In Killing

BENTON — Mrs. Mary Jane Deik, 44, of Bertrand, was convicted of manslaughter in an all-day trial yesterday.

She is accused of killing her husband, John R. Deik, 77, with a .22 caliber rifle Feb. 7 at their trailer home.

Mrs. Deik was charged with first degree murder. The trial was held in Scott County on a charge of venue.

Mississippi County Prosecuting Attorney Rod Ashby asked the jury, which deliberated 41 minutes, for a life sentence on the murder charge. The jury did not pronounce sentence. This will be done later by Circuit Judge Marshall Craig.

Controversy Boils as Nixon Goes On TV to Explain Aid Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today called deepening American involvement in Cambodia "a grave development" and said it raises "important questions concerning United States policy in the widening war in Indochina."

The committee unanimously approved a statement expressing its concern as President Nixon prepared to address the nation tonight on U.S. support for the South Vietnamese operation into Cambodia.

Nixon invited members of the Cabinet and "a good cross-section" of the Republican and Democratic leadership of Congress to meet with him an hour before his television-radio appearance, to brief them on his remarks.

Asked how the President was responding to frequently adverse congressional reaction, press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler declined comment.

He said Nixon authorized support for the move under his constitutional powers to conduct foreign affairs and as commander in chief of the armed forces.

Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., said the Senate committee was especially interested in finding out whether the South Vietnamese assault had the approval of the

Bid to Suspend Part of MIRV Buildup Fails

WASHINGTON (AP) — An effort to suspend part of the U.S. MIRV nuclear warhead buildup—which opponents said could wreck the U.S.-Soviet disarmament talks—has been defeated by the House.

An amendment to cut all $71.7 million for MIRV-tipped Minuteman III missiles from the $30.24 billion military weapons authorization was rejected Wednesday 5 to 3.

Rep. Jeffrey Cohelan, D-Calif., the amendment's sponsor, called the buildup incomprehensible in the face of U.S. efforts to negotiate disarmament with the Soviets.

He said the Soviet response could be to mount a capability to launch a first-strike nuclear attack against the United States.

But Rep. Leslie C. Arends, R-Ill., said the Soviets already appear to be building a first-strike capability and the U.S. MIRV buildup and Safeguard antimissile system are needed to deter it.

The sword through the years has become a symbol of war and a badge of honor although it is no longer a major weapon of war.

City Costs Rise, No Tax Increase

Budget estimates for operations of Sikeston city government for fiscal year 1970-71 call for $65,200 above the 1969-70 budget, but the city's tax rate will remain at $1.74.

This is made possible by a $292,200 increase in assessed valuation of real, personal and merchants property. Assessments total $18,399,000. The new budget is $901,200.

This budget provides for a seven per cent increase in city employees salaries as well as six additional policemen.

Funds are included to buy the old post office building. Tentative plans call for converting the building into a city hall and jail.

The budget was approved Wednesday at a city council meeting.

City Manager W. Raymer Miller said the budget includes these city employee fringe benefits: one-half cost of hospitalization insurance, and uniform allowance for policemen and firemen, and

Controversy Arises Over Pay Increases

CHARLESTON — The Concerned Parents Association, interested in operations of the R-1 school district, will meet Monday at 8 p.m. in Knights of Columbus Hall. H. B. Morrow is chairman.

The purpose is to air differences over a levy increase for teacher salary hikes voted this month. A controversy has arisen over increases in administration salaries.

In a meeting after the election the school board decided to raise beginning teacher salaries from $6,000 to $6,400.

The increase was based on $56,000 from the levy increase, according to Supt. Tom Wells.

In a meeting Monday night, a salary index was set up, Superintendent Wells said, from a reserve fund that was set up at the time the district was organized.

An increase for 10 of the 11 administrators would be based on their salary schedule, with an increase ranging from 1.1 times their salary for nine months, and to include from two weeks to one and one half months extra time put in, depending on the schedule.

The salary scale depends on the number of years taught and the college degree, with a maximum of 1.5 times present salary.

Street widening planned for 1970 include Kingshighway from Center street to Lake street; Ables Road from South Ingram to Dona street; and a new street to National Lock Company from County Line Road to Highway 60.

Street resurfacing plans include Kingshighway from Railroad to Center street; Front street from Kingshighway to Stoddard; Center street from Kingshighway to Stoddard, and Malone Avenue from New Madrid to School.

Griffin, however, said the matter was discussed at the weekly Republican Policy Committee luncheon. "They expressed the realization that this is a serious step," he said. "Some of them expressed opposition, but mostly there was a wait-and-see attitude."

Vote on Judge Put off

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee put off its vote today on the Supreme Court nomination of Judge Harry A. Blackmun until next Tuesday.

Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said that although he is not opposed to the Rochester, Minn. judge, he requested the delay so that committee members would have a chance to study the hearing record.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., who had indicated prior to the closed meeting that he might force a delay, told newsmen he had been prepared to vote today but with the understanding that he would have a week to prepare separate views of the nomination.

Bayh, a leader in the fight against the two Southern judges whose nominations to the Supreme Court were rejected by the Senate, also said he wanted an opportunity to review Blackmun's tax returns prior to Senate action.

However, Bayh said that as of now he knows of no one on the 17-member committee who plans to vote against recommending Senate confirmation of Blackmun, now a judge of the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., called today's meeting in hopes of taking a vote but noted any member had the right to invoke a rule delaying action for a week.

At Wednesday's hearing, Bayh told Blackmun "the fact that a man of your caliber and excellence is before us now provides some solace for past wounds and confrontations."

"Perhaps these old battles have been worthwhile," said Bayh, a leader in Senate rejection of President Nixon's earlier nominations of Judge Clement F. Haynsworth of Greenville, S.C. and Judge G. Harrold Carswell of Tallahassee, Fla.

The committee's favorable attitude to Blackmun cut across party lines and political philosophies.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., predicted prompt confirmation of Blackmun and added "it appears you are a man of high ethical standards, as was Judge Haynsworth, and of competence, as was Judge Carswell."

Thurmond, blaming rejection of the two Southern judges on opposition by labor and civil rights groups, said he did not believe they would have "the gall to engage in another round of defamation" against Blackmun, who lives in Rochester, Minn.

As expected, no one appeared to testify against the 61-year-old Blackmun, a judge on the 8th U.S. Court of Appeals since 1969. He drew support from both the Democratic and Republican members of the Minnesota congressional delegation.

Blackmun, described by Nixon as a strict constructionist nominated to give more balance to the court, assured senators he would do his best to keep his personal ideas and philosophy from influencing his decisions.

The judge said he would leave to others an interpretation of his legal record.

But he told the committee he believes his record reflects a sensitivity to labor, civil rights and the problems of "the little people."

Review Ordered Of Soviet Pilot In Egypt Report

In Egypt Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has ordered a full scale review of the Middle East situation in the wake of a State Department report that Russian pilots are flying combat planes in Egypt.

White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Wednesday, "The President has ordered an immediate and full evaluation of intelligence reports and the implication of them on the strategic balance in the Middle East."

"We regard this as a serious development and potentially dangerous," State Department Press Officer Robert J. McCloskey added.

In addition, a spokesman said, the United States plans to ask the Soviet Union what its intentions are in permitting such actions.

The Russian-piloted aircraft reportedly have not ventured into Israeli airspace, sources said, but stayed within Egyptian boundaries.

Soviet Crews also are reportedly manning Moscow-built surface-to-air missile sites.

LAW DAY, 1970

Special naturalization services for immigrants have been a traditional part of the ceremonies held in various parts of the United States to commemorate Law Day on Friday, May 1. But this year, there will be a new touch. Aliens serving in the armed forces in Viet Nam will be flown to Hawaii and given the oath of allegiance — if they are willing to give up part of their rest and recreation leaves.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service isn't certain how many servicemen will take part in the ceremonies, but it expects a good turn-out. Modifications in naturalization laws approved on Oct. 24, 1968, make it easier for servicemen to become citizens. The new procedures drop the five - year residence requirement for those serving in the armed forces if they meet other criteria for citizenship.

Meanwhile, back in Washington, a bi-partisan group of Capitol Hill lawmakers will be sponsoring a national tribute to the 1,450 U.S. servicemen either reported as missing in action or prisoners of war in North Viet Nam. The ceremony will be held at Constitution Hall. The sponsors have divergent views on the war, says Sen. Robert Dole (R-Kan.). But "all agree that American prisoners have not been dealt with in accordance with the 1949 Geneva Convention — even though the North Vietnamese themselves ratified it in 1957."

May 1 was deliberately chosen for the tribute to those being called "America's forgotten men," adds Dole. A major objective of Law Day is international justice. May Day is also the traditional workers' holiday in Europe, although in recent years it seems to have become the special property of the Soviet Union and other Communist nations.

SPACE, TOURISM AND ECOLOGY

ORLANDO, Fla. — The John F. Kennedy Space Center, 45 miles east of here as the rocket flies, is more than a monument to science and technology. As NASA employees at Cape Kennedy are fond of pointing out, the space center also is a tourist attraction and a wildlife refuge.

More than 220 species of birds inhabit the protected areas of Cape Kennedy and vicinity. Prominent among them is the bald eagle, one of whose nests is pointed out by guides on tours of the space center. The American alligator, listed by the Interior Department as a rare and endangered species, is a Cape Kennedy resident, too.

NASA's role as guardian of wildlife was suggested almost subliminally in a color film shown to space center visitors before the launching of Apollo 13. Shots of a Saturn rocket poised on its pad were intercut with scenes of ducks, gulls and pelicans. The implication seemed to be that nature and technology can peacefully coexist.

But can they? Many Floridians have their doubts. The 107-mile Cross Florida Barge Canal, long a pet project of the Army Corps of Engineers, is four years behind schedule and is drawing fire because of its cost and its effect on the ecology of central Florida. A recent letter to the Orlando Sentinel suggested that the money spent on "this boondoggle" could "much better be used for roads, education, or perhaps not spent at all and thereby fight inflation!"

Man and his environment are in conflict also in southern Florida, where land development threatens to reduce Everglades National Park's already diminished water supply. Thermal pollution is a problem in Biscayne Bay, off Miami. Two nuclear generators being built by Florida Power & Light at Turkey Point would compound the problem by discharging water heated to 95 degrees into the bay.

Less dramatic examples of pollution are stirring concern at the local level. Residents of St. Petersburg and of Umatilla have complained about open-air burning of trash. And Orange and Osceola counties recently formed a monitoring committee to combat pollution "strong enough to kill hogs and cows" in waterways.

Florida conservationists have opposed dredging and filling of bays for years, but with scant success. Now, though, the tide of opinion appears to be turning in their favor. Chairman Charles E. Rainey of the Pinellas County (St. Petersburg) Commission has asked the Florida cabinet to declare all county waters — to the 12-mile limit in the Gulf of Mexico — an aquatic preserve. Such action would have the effect of eliminating up to 90 percent of all new dredge-and-fill projects.

Floridians' concern about their environment is motivated in some degree by concern about the state's all-important tourist industry. A Biscayne Bay without fish, for example, probably would mean fewer visitors to Dade County. By the same token, further cutbacks in the space program could have a disastrous effect on tourism in the Titusville-Cocoa-Beach-Melbourne area. NASA officials take pride in the fact that more than two million persons have visited the Kennedy Space Center since public tours began in July 1966.

But the uses of adversity can, hopefully, be sweet where tourism is concerned. In this connection, a Manatee County mother told a Tampa Tribune reporter at the height of the recent school-bus dispute: "Up until now nobody ever heard of Bradenton. Now we're news across the nation, and I just bet our tourism will increase because of it. You see, some good comes of everything."

THE AIRCRAFT CARRIER AT BAY

A joint congressional subcommittee is scheduled to report on the U.S. Navy's need for nuclear-powered aircraft carriers by Thursday (April 30).

A new fight is brewing over congressional efforts to limit the Navy's fleet of aircraft carriers. Not since the Truman administration cancelled the first 60,000-ton super carrier in 1949 — triggering an admirals' revolt — has the Navy been so concerned about the symbol of its supremacy at sea.

Critics of the Navy's 15-ship attack carrier force, such as Senators Clifford P. Case (R-N.J.) and Walter F. Mondale (D-Minn.), charge that by continuing to emphasize highly vulnerable and costly carriers, the Navy is preparing to re-fight the battle of Midway rather than looking to the future. They claim that land-based aircraft can perform the same mission at a cheaper cost.

But Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, newly named Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, argues: "For all levels of military action other than all-out nuclear war — from a show of force to general war — the attack carrier is the primary striking force of the Navy."

The battle began last year when a small band of congressmen challenged the Pentagon's appropriations as part of the effort to re-order the nation's priorities. They unsuccessfully attempted to delete $377 million from the bill to continue construction of the Navy's third nuclear carrier. But an amendment was approved guaranteeing a joint study of the nuclear carrier program by the two Armed Services Committee before any more ships were built.

Most of the nine members of the subcommittee are considered pro-military. The Armed Forces Journal has forecast that it is likely to recommend funding for the start of work on a fourth nuclear carrier. As a sop to the opposition, the subcommittee may suggest post-Viet Nam cutbacks in the Navy's carrier strength. If such a limited recommendation is brought in, Capitol Hill sources told Editorial Research Reports there will be a fight.

Three basic questions have been raised by critics about the carrier fleet: number, need and cost. Case and Mondale charge the Navy has tried to maintain 15 carriers since 1946 because "it is a figure rooted in the Washington Naval Disarmament Treaty of 1921, which allocated to the U.S. Navy 15 capital ships." Now, the carrier has merely replaced the battleship as the capital ship.

Critics maintain that the low-profile foreign policy adopted by President Nixon will reduce American involvement abroad and the need for carriers. The Navy argues otherwise. Admiral Moorer contends that the requirement for carrier-based aircraft is growing because the number of overseas U.S. air bases decreased from 105 in 1957 to 35 in 1969. Fending off charges of carrier vulnerability to missiles and submarines, the Navy responds that its mobility is a defense.

Turning to costs, the critics point out that 40 percent of the Navy's budget goes to maintenance of the carrier fleet. It costs $1.6 billion to buy a carrier task force with its escort ships and logistical support. In contrast, it is stated that the Air Force has techniques to build air fields needed for a 90-plane wing for $245 million.

The Soviet Union has no attack carriers. But to the U.S. Navy, more than a weapons system is at stake. Without the carrier, the Navy would be reduced to an overseas deterrent force and a grab-bag of small surface ships.

While most Americans have been affected one way or another by the reduction of railroad passenger service in recent years, it is time those communities located on branch lines be concerned over losing their railroad freight service, too.

Far-Mar-Co, representing 300,000 midwest farmers has cited that there is a rail plan to curtail and eventually end all service on branch lines — and the abandonment or destruction of 42 percent of the national boxcar supply. The Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad confirms this thinking by asking the ICC approval to abandon 333 miles of track between Altus and Keyes, stretching from southwest Oklahoma almost to the western end of the Panhandle. The MKT told the ICC it would lose $1.6 million a year in western Oklahoma — even if it had the $12 million necessary to update its tracks.

NEW YORK (AP) — Take the high pressure out of a generations, why does the television star's life and what do continue working at all? You have? Well, in the case of Garry Moore, you have a relaxed philosopher and a happy man.

"It would scare hell out of me if I were suddenly faced with doing a big hit show regularly again," he said. "I couldn't stand the anxiety."

Garry, one of the best-liked men in show business, remembers with pleasure — but with no desire to repeat them — the crowded years when he was the star of two of the nation's top-rated network shows. In entertainment circles it was reported he was earning an awesome $30,000 a week.

"When you're real hot," said Garry, "you're working almost every moment you're awake. Somebody has you by the ear all the time, even when you're riding in a cab."

"This is why actors are so self-centered. They are constantly turned back in on themselves by other people as well as by their own inclinations."

Today Garry restricts his activities largely to a weekly broadcast for the "Voice of America" and a five-times-a-week show as emcee of a new edition of "To Tell The Truth," the longtime television game favorite.

WASHINGTON Merry - Go - Round By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — U.S. newcomers were sent on temporary duty to improve the vital communications between P n e m p e n h and Washington. Ever since this column has been deluged with inquiries, for example, pleading for the truth about Cambodia.

Many Americans apparently suspect that the U.S. secretly engineered overthrow of left-leaning Prince Norodom Sihanouk and precipitated the Cambodian crisis. This column has carefully investigated the backstage activities and can state categorically that the U.S. played no part in Sihanouk's ouster.

President Nixon not only hoped to keep Cambodia neutral but was pleased to deal with Sihanouk. At the time of his downfall, ironically, he was appealing to Moscow and Peking to bring pressure on Hanoi to pull North Vietnamese troops out of Cambodia.

Queen Mother's Role His mother, Queen Sisowath Kossamak, at first hailed the anti-communist demonstrations in Cambodia. Not until her son reached her from Peking to warn that the demonstrations had gone too far did she reverse herself.

Then she played a backstage role in precipitating the showdown in the National Assembly. In secret meetings with Cambodian leaders, the Queen Mother expressed her displeasure over the demonstrations, accused those who opposed her son of treason, and called for a vote of confidence in Sihanouk.

The Assembly, instead, voted Sihanouk out of power. The new leaders strived at first to maintain Cambodian neutrality and even delivered two protests to the U.S. embassy over American shelling and helicopter incursions across the border.

At this time, there were only 11 people on the embassy staff. No other U.S. officials, CIA agents or special forces were present in Cambodia. There was an embassy staff has now been expanded to 16. Four of the

Some 75 percent of the country's coal. Not enough is being dug even now. It all began some years ago when the "futurists" said that coal is the dust of the ages. Nuclear energy produced in a shoe box-sized container would give the nation what it needs. So capital has invested elsewhere. Who in view of the new wizardry would put their money in coal, or try for new fields, or dig deeper, or do much more than move along with needed modernization?

Well, the little old magic shoe boxes turned out to be as easily available as a carload of Aladdin's lamps. Someday, yes. Today, no. And today the coal is in short, short supply. Much of it is mined by what once we called "captive mines" (pits owned by companies which need the black stuff for their own massive use). Much of it is going under contract to Japan and some to Europe.

Much digging will be slowed by the new fantastically technical safety and health regulations.

So there are some mighty big power companies. I'm told by experts at the Federal Power Commission (FPC), in the coal industry, in the union and by some of the electrical power industry's most prestigious leaders, which just could not produce electricity if there are slowdowns, wildcats or actual strikes in the pits.

First to be hit, the FPC spokesman said, would be the Southeast, then the Northeast, then the Central States and the Western Central states. There you have the grid gut of America's most heavily industrialized sectors and megalopolises. Comes the nationwide strike following air-conditioning strain and the nation's lights could go out.

"There are companies down their own district officers by a very low fuel supply," says then. . . . America's lights may go out this fall unless these men are given this fundamental right to be represented by men of their choosing."

Here in Pittsburgh the Yablonski forces, a minority, the power needed by this talk bluntness of a strike. They have about 75 days supply in stockpile. However, many emolumented by their political ally, Rep. Ken Hechler, the down to 25 or 30 days. Some barnstorming West Virginia Democrat.

Early in March, Congressman Hechler talked bluntness of a nationwide strike as the weapon with which to smash the Tony Boyle leadership of the UMW.

"You hold the power which you can use effectively to accomplish these objectives even if it means turning off the lights of the nation," he told a miners rally.

Then he urged them not to hesitate to use such manpower to turn off America's electric power, in order to win what he called "decency" in the coal diggers' funds, most of it spent in violation of government rules.

Dunn then returned to his palatial suite, his deep drapes and his meadow of thick carpeting, paid for by $13,796 in taxpayer funds, most of it spent in violation of government rules.

Ann Landers Declaration of a 16-Year-Old...Have Faith and Courage...And Keep Trying

Dear Ann Landers: Here's a message for "Had it," the mother of a teen-age Cop-Out. "Keep yourself clean. Respect older people. Accept responsibility. The world doesn't owe you anything. Get moving. Make a contribution." These are the same rules I was raised by and I'm 16 -- a member of your son's generation. Apparently you believe all teen-agers are alike. You are mistaken.

It's obvious from your letter that you are your husband have given your son too much freedom and too much of everything. You probably feel guilty because you have let him walk all over you. You also let him mouth off and be obnoxious. You say your son has been kicked out of two schools for smoking marijuana but you would send him to a third school if he can get in someplace. Why? I'll bet he wouldn't have been out for smoking marijuana if it was his own money going down the drain. Why make the same mistake a third time?

Quit asking yourself where you failed and start to make some demands on that spoiled son. Don't let him give you that old line about inheriting a lousy world. Your generation inherited a lousy world, too. It's what we do with that lousy world that counts. Smoking marijuana won't help.

Lay down the law to your son, which is what you should have done years ago. If he rebels, kick him out. I know you love him, but maybe being forced to make his own way in this world will make a man out of him. M.W. of Phoenix

Dear Ann Landers: We live in a four-family flat. The people below us work crazy hours -- when they are on the night shift they sleep during the day. When they are on the split shift they sleep at unpredictable hours. We never know if they are in or out.

We have a six-month baby who makes a lot of laundry. My washing machine is directly above our neighbor's bedroom. I have to run at least two loads every day. The neighbors complain that this interferes with their rest.

Like most women I do my vacuuming in the morning and this also bothers them. Twice last month when we had guests they pounded on the pipes with a monkey-wrench and beat on our ceiling with a broom handle. This can be very embarrassing when you are trying to carry on a conversation.

Yesterday the baby cried and woke them up. They called on the phone and screamed, "Don't you know this is Sunday?" My husband told them WE knew it was Sunday but the baby didn't."

We have never had any trouble with neighbors before and we would like to resolve our problems with these people because we cannot move. Will you suggest a solution? -- People Who Want Peace

Dear People: Invite the neighbors for a cup of coffee and let them know you want peace. Offer to do your laundry and vacuuming when they are at work. Explain that you can't control the baby's crying but you'll do your best. When they see you are interested in a better relationship the chances are good that they will cooperate. The solution in a word is -- communication.

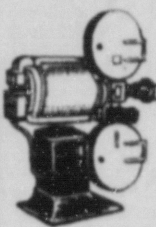

Confidential to: Want To Help Them: Your letter suggest that you might be getting vicarious kicks. If you really want to help suggest that they go to a doctor.

Ted Kennedy's Wrong Turn Claim Disputed By Judge

BOSTON, AP — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's claim that a wrong turn led to his plunge from a narrow bridge on Chappaquiddick Island has been disputed by an inquest judge who said the senator was negligent in the accident that killed Mary Jo Kopechne.

Kennedy said he rejected as unjustified the inference and the findings of Judge James A. Boyle, whose inquest report raised new questions about the accident that altered American politics.

And with his statement, the last of the Kennedy brothers said Wednesday he would speak no more of the fateful night on Chappaquiddick.

"The facts of this incident are now fully public," he said, "and eventual judgment and understanding rests where it belongs."

On Nov. 3, the 38-year-old assistant majority leader seeks re-election to the U.S. Senate. He said he did not know whether the inquest papers made public Wednesday would be used against him in the campaign.

Kennedy's inquest testimony gave no clear account of his reasons for failing to report the accident to police until more than 10 hours after it happened.

He denied any personal involvement with Miss Kopechne and said that at no time the night of the accident was he under the influence of alcohol.

In his tardy police report on the July 18 accident, and in his testimony to the secret inquest last Jan. 5, Kennedy said he turned by mistake onto the dirt road that led him to Dike Bridge and the accident. He said he and Miss Kopechne were headed for the ferry from Chappaquiddick back to Edgartown, on Martha's Vineyard.

In the major surprise of the inquest papers, Boyle said he didn't believe it. The judge, who retires from the bench at midnight tonight, recited the inquest evidence, then declared: "I infer a reasonable and probable explanation of the totality of the above facts is that Kennedy and Kopechne did not intend to return to Edgartown at this time; that Kennedy did not intend to drive to the ferry slip and his turn onto Dike Road was intentional."

That road leads away from the ferry crossing, across the bridge to a lonely, undeveloped beach on the easterly shore of Chappaquiddick.

Boyle's report described the bridge this way: "Dike Bridge is a wooden structure 10 feet, six inches wide, has timber curbs on each side four inches high by 10 inches wide, no other guardrails, and runs at an angle of 27 degrees to the left of the road. There are no signs of artificial lights on the bridge or its approach."

"A speed of even 20 miles per hour, as Kennedy testified to, operating a car as large as this Oldsmobile," the judge declared, "would at least be negligent and, possibly, reckless. If Kennedy knew of this hazard, his operation of the vehicle constituted criminal conduct."

The judge said Kennedy had been driven over the bridge twice on the day of the accident. "I believe it probable that Kennedy knew of the hazard that lay ahead of him on Dike Road but that, for some reason not apparent from the testimony, he failed to exercise due care as he approached the bridge," the judge said.

Boyle's report, dated Feb. 18, did not explain why no additional charge was filed against Kennedy, who pleaded guilty on July 25 to leaving the scene of the accident. Boyle sentenced him to two months in jail, suspended, and a year's probation.

The possibility of new charges remained among the unanswered questions. By state Supreme Court order, the inquest papers were released only after Dist. Atty. Edmund D. Dinis pronounced the case closed and certified that he planned no further prosecution.

Until that time, the inquest transcript and the Boyle report were locked in a courthouse and safe.

A new Dukes County grand jury goes into session next 45 minutes to find Miss Kopechne. They failed, took legal official says there is nothing to prevent it from reopening the case.

Boyle could not be reached for comment.

In Kennedy's two hour appearance at the inquest in Edgartown District Court, he testified that his destination when he and Miss Kopechne left a Chappaquiddick party was the Katama Shores Motor Inn in Edgartown, where she was staying, and then the Shiretown Inn, where he had a room.

In his report, Boyle noted that Kennedy normally did not drive, and that John B. Crimmins, his chauffeur, was among the guests at the Chappaquiddick party. Six men were there, as were six young women who had worked in the presidential campaign of the late report this accident.

Robert F. Kennedy. "A lot of different thoughts came into my mind at that time."

"I just wondered how all of Crimmins that he was leaving for Shiretown, and requested the car key."

"Kopechne roomed with Eather Newburgh, the latter having in her possession the key and to their room."

"Kopechne told me no one, other than Kennedy, that she was leaving for Katama Shores and did not ask Newburgh for the room key."

"Kopechne left her pocketbook at the cottage when she drove off with Kennedy."

"It was known that the ferry ceased operation about midnight and special arrangements must be made for a later trip. No such arrangements were made."

Kennedy testified that after the plunge he recalled Miss Kopechne struggling, kicking "and I, at this time, opened my eyes and realized I was upside down, that water was crashing in on me, that it was pitch black ..."

"I realized that Mary Jo and I had to get out of the car."

He said he remembered the pushing at the door, groping for the window.

"And I remember the last sensation of being completely mishap might have occurred to out of air and inhaling what was a half a lung full of water and assuming ... that I Edgartown side of the channel wasn't going to get out of that car alive and then somehow I can remember coming up to the last energy of just pushing, hotel,

"Well, they asked had I reported the accident and why I hadn't reported the accident and I told them about my own thoughts and feelings as I swam across that channel ... and as I almost tossed and turned, paced that room and walked around that room that night ..."

"I told them how I somehow believed that when the sun came up and it was a new morning that what had happened the night before would not have happened and did not happen, and how I just couldn't gain the strength within me, the moral strength to call Mrs. Kopechne at 2 o'clock in the morning and tell her that her daughter was dead."

Kennedy, Markham and Gargan took the ferry back to Chappaquiddick.

"It was to make a private phone call to one of the dearest and oldest friends that I have and that was to Mr. Burke Marshall," Kennedy said.

"It was my thought that once I went to the police station that I would be involved in a myriad of details and I wanted to talk to this friend before I undertook that responsibility."

Marshall is a lawyer, a former assistant attorney general under Robert F. Kennedy. Sen. Kennedy did not reach him. Boyle's summary said Kennedy also telephoned his administrative assistant, David Burke, in Washington.

Kennedy then returned to Edgartown and reported the accident to Police Chief Dominick Arena. "I think it was sometime before 10 a.m.," he said.

As Kennedy left the witness stand, the judge again sought an explanation of his failure to seek further aid the night of the accident.

"It is because I was completely convinced at that time that no further help and assistance would do Mary Jo any more good," Kennedy said.

"I realized that she must be drowned and still in the car at this time and it appeared the question in my mind at that time was, what should be done about the accident."

Kennedy said that a week after the accident he was considering resigning from the Senate. Five days after that he said he would remain, would run again, and if re-elected, would serve a full term.

Until the accident and its aftermath, he had ranked at the head of the list of potential Democratic challengers to President Nixon in 1972. A six-year Senate term would take him past that election, and Kennedy said his full-term pledge meant he was out of the 1972 presidential picture.

In his inquest testimony, as in his televised account of the accident last July 25, Kennedy denied any involvement with Miss Kopechne.

"I have never in my life, as I have stated in my television talk, had any personal relationship whatsoever with Mary Jo Kopechne," he testified.

Kennedy said he had two drinks of rum and Coca Cola during the Chappaquiddick party, some beer earlier in the day.

Judge Boyle: In your opinion you would be sober at the time that you operated the motor vehicle to the Dike Bridge?

Kennedy: Absolutely sober.

Criminal Action A Possibility

By M. W. MINARCIN JR., Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — A possibility remained today that further criminal action could result from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's auto accident last summer in which Mary Jo Kopechne died.

"There would be nothing to stop a grand jury from reopening the case," said a highly placed legal source close to proceedings already completed. "Grand juries have great latitude in Massachusetts."

In the event of a new grand jury investigation of the accident, however, there would remain the question of a state Supreme Court ruling in the case last year.

The court, in directing that the inquest into the accident be closed to the public, declared that the testimony given at the proceeding "should not be released until all threat of prosecution was removed."

Earlier this month, Dist. Atty. Edmund Dinis, who requested the inquest, filed a formal statement saying that no further formal investigation was planned. Subsequently, the inquest transcript was ordered released and it was made public

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Jack M. Jones, state tourism director, told the Senate Appropriations Committee today Missouri seems to attract more tourists from the Chicago area than anywhere else.

He said there is also a strong pull for family vacationers from Indiana.

The commission plans to spend about $266,000 in 1970-71 advertising Missouri as a family vacationland, appealing primarily to middle class vacationers. Jones said about $80,000 is spent in Missouri advertising media.

To find out how effective the advertising is and how many tourists Missouri actually draw each year, Jones said a research analyst at $11,48 a year is needed badly.

Dr. Ben L. Morton, who is leaving July 1 as executive secretary of the Missouri Commission on Higher Education for a higher paying job in Illinois, told the committee he was loathe to leave because "I see great possibilities" in Missouri.

Before leaving, he promised to give the governor and the legislature his recommendation for strengthening the present law. It gives the commission only limited authority to coordinate the programs of state colleges and universities.

Tuesday Revenue Director James E. Schaffner told the committee collecting new city sales taxes is "going to be a monstrous task."

Kopechne's Defer Comment

BERKELEY HEIGHTS, N.J. (AP) — The parents of Mary Jo Kopechne say they will defer comment on an inquest report released in Boston until they read it with a lawyer.

The Kopechne's said Wednesday night they would go to Wilkes Barre, Pa. to consult with attorney Joseph Flanagan, who has represented them in the case. Miss Kopechne was born in Wilkes Barre and was buried there last summer.

Flanagan, who was successful in preventing exhumation of Mary Jo's body for an autopsy after the accident, late last year, said, "I have ordered a copy of the inquest report and transcript and will have no comment at least until after I have read it thoroughly."

Flanagan also is representing the parents in a civil action against Sen. Edward M. Kennedy

POLLY'S POINTERS

She Would Like to Know How to Repair Old Dolls

By POLLY CRAMER

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—I have some old dolls that are 50 or more years old. The elastic in them is stretched and some of the bodies are cracked. I would appreciate any help or advice about repairing the dolls as I hate to throw away these old friends.—MRS. A. S.

DEAR MRS. A. S.—I am sure we will be hearing from readers who have worked with old dolls. They seem to be very valuable and collectable items now so do not throw them away until you know they are past being repaired.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—I want to tell Mrs. A. W. S. who has an expensive plastic tablecloth with a felt backing that I clean mine as follows: I use dishwashing detergent in warm water and scrub thoroughly with a stiff nail brush. Wipe off, then rinse with a cloth wet with warm water. The cloth will look like new. Machine-washing often leaves wrinkles that are nearly impossible to remove.—MRS. M. R.

DEAR GIRLS—Be careful not to use any strong cleanser, like a powder that contains bleach, as it may dull the colors in the design on the cloth.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—You can use those scraps of soap and take care of the dirty lines on shirt collars and cuffs at the same time. I make little packages of soap scraps wrapped in nylon net. I wrap the net around the pieces several times and secure the tucked-in end with thread. I wet the soiled collars and cuffs and scrub the soiled areas with these packages and it really works. Much better than using a brush and it does a better job than anything I have ever tried.—GLENN

DEAR POLLY—My daughter came up with the best idea. She puts the foam head for her wig on a bathroom plunger which sticks to the floor. Works beautifully. She leaves it sitting in her room that way. It does not take up much space and can be decorated by using a bit of imagination.—MRS. J. S.

New Trial for Brown Denied

CAIRO — A convicted Kennett, Mo., man, Donald Dillard Brown, formerly of Mounds, lost his circuit court bid for a new trial Friday when Associate Circuit Judge Jack Morris, Harrisburg, presiding at a Pulaski County court session, denied a motion for a new trial under the Post Conviction Act.

Brown, who was convicted last February on the charge of rape and robbery and sentenced to serve 15-20 years in the Menard Penitentiary at Chester, failed to convince the court that a juror at his trial was prejudiced prior to her selection as a juror and that his companion, Eulice Davis, misrepresented the facts at his trial.

Davis, who is serving 8-12 years at Menard on his conviction to the same charges as Brown, was a witness for the state and alleged that he was offered $300 to testify for Brown.

Pulaski County State's Atty. Byron L. Connell also took the stand to testify that he had not had any private conversations with the court in connection with the case as alleged by the defense.

Judge Morris found the evidence for the petition for a new trial insufficient and ordered Brown and Davis remanded to the penitentiary.

Both men were convicted of the rape and robbery of an Olive Branch woman on the

Adventurers Are Victims in Nightmarish Tale

DELIVERANCE. By James Dickey. Houghton Mifflin, $5.95.

You might call this novel a story of mounting excitement. It begins with what seems to be a mild adventure and develops into a nerve-snapping chronicle of danger, horror and death.

As a matter of sport four men decide to make a run in two canoes through the uncharted rapids of a mountain stream in the South. It is a foolhardy attempt, because these men are amateurs.

The instigator of this bit of bravado is Lewis Medlock, one of those muscle-building types who is good at weight lifting, bow and arrow marksmanship and other manly recreations. He has a thing about preparing the body for "survival" on this expedition the word turns out quite nastily to be the key to the whole event.

His companions are a couple of typical suburbanites and Ed Gentry, who narrates the story and becomes the key to deliverance from danger. The crux of the trouble is that up in the mountains the four adventurers are discovered by a pair of murderous, morose hillbillies, and from there on there is a bitter fight for life.

The author is a poet of considerable standing, and on the side a lecturer and teacher. For several years he has been working to complete this, his first novel.

He has the poet's gift of language and a powerfully graphic narrative touch. He has written this nightmarish tale of man against evil with a driving force.

Miles A. Smith

First reigning king to visit the United States was David Kalakaua, king of the Sandwich Islands (Hawaii), who visited Washington, D.C., in 1874.

TO BE SHOWN
Friday May 1 - 7:30 PM

The determination of a football player and his high school steady to rise above today's new morality trends highlights the film story for "Without Onions," feature length color motion picture to be shown Friday, March 1, 1970 at 7:30 p.m. The film's appearance in this area is sponsored by The First Assembly of God Church, Sikeston, Mo.

Pete and Sonya, typical American high school students, had been following the crowd in their patterns of conduct until a businessman in their community showed them how relative Christian faith can be in the life of a modern teenager.

Intrigued by their new discovery, Pete and Sonya determined to relate their faith to others on campus. As a part of their effort, Pete turned in his best year in football and the two of them made significant contributions to the Honor Club Seminar, their high school's top prestige group.

John Washbrook, known to millions as the child star of the "My Friend Flicka" television series, plays the lead in the film. The series, produced over ten years ago, still appears on many TV stations. Washbrook is supported by professional actors Beverly Washburn, Tony Moxkus and David Mink.

If You Were the Judge

Wife Title Can Be Liberally Applied

By Jack Strauss, L.L.B.
When Morris met Hilda at a party, it was like Cupid had shot him with a bazooka instead of a bow and arrow. For weeks thereafter, he thought about her night and day. Then, after taking her out several times, he finally left his wife and took up residence with his shapely femme fatale. But Hilda insisted upon a certain degree of respectability in their relationship. This she achieved by the simple expedient of adding "Mrs." to her name and passing herself off to friends and neighbors as Morris's wife.

Almost immediately, Morris's real wife took exception to Hilda's expedient. With ice-cold vinegar running through her veins, she started a court action to compel Hilda to stop impersonating her.

"Amongst other things," she told the judge, "Hilda's a fraud and a fake. Morris has only one wife and that's me. Applying simple logic, therefore, by parading around as Morris's wife, she's impersonating me. And, I want it stopped!"

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you order Hilda to drop the "Mrs."?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that Morris's wife was not being impersonated, that Hilda never pretended to be her. Rather, she pretended to be Morris's wife. (Based upon a 1897 New York Supreme Court, App. Div. Decision)

Editor Blanton:
The teamsters are really sabotaging business in all of its aspects - another classic illustration of the attempt of collectivist mentalities to reverse the laws of cause and effect - they never stop to think that were it not for the farsighted men of vision and intellect who invest, plan and create, they would still be hoeing cotton in Arkansas or digging ditches in Kentucky.

Unless people learn to interpret the real significance of the industrial revolution and the true nature of capitalism as the only possible form of economic system that can save the World, then we will definitely - with utter and absolute certainty, perish.

The inescapable laws of reality cannot be evaded either on an international or personal level for long; or to state it more simply - how long do consumers think they can exist when the producers are handcuffed, taxed, bound, gagged and penalized for the very thing that enables and guarantees those peoples existence? This is not rhetoric or opinion, but simple fact.

More Safety for Next Apollo

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA) - The type of oxygen tank carried by Apollo 13 is made of beryllium. Such tanks carry oxygen under heavy pressure. But such tanks have their limits. If the pressure gets too great, they explode like hand grenades.

An electrical short circuit could cause a build-up of pressure. So could a breakdown in the cooling system which keeps the oxygen at proper temperature. (A rise in the temperature causes gas to expand, creating pressure. When there is no room to expand, the pressures that can be built up are tremendous.)

It is known from the data that there was a build-up of pressure in an oxygen tank aboard Apollo 13 shortly before the explosion.

This is some of the part-fact, part-conjecture discussion now going on among scientists involved with man in space. No one is certain whether what is related above actually occurred.

But if this is, in fact, the type of explosion which did take place, it probably happened quickly. The time from the beginning build-up of pressure to the explosion was perhaps a matter of minutes—say 10 at the most.

The Apollo 13 astronauts would have had no way to stop it.

Such an explosion possibly could be prevented by building the walls of an oxygen tank thicker. Or perhaps the pressure build-up and the explosion could have been averted by putting redundancy in the cooling system, that is by building an alternate cooling system that could be flicked into operation if the pressure in an oxygen tank started to rise unduly. But it would have to be done quickly.

Or a switch could be installed which would enable the astronauts to release some of the oxygen from a tank at the first sign of increasing pressure.

It must be emphasized that it is not certain the explosion was as described above. As noted in a previous column, it may be that the scientists will never know for certain. That is even if they know a tank exploded, they may never be certain what caused that explosion.

What is certain is that the next Apollo will have even more safety features. There will be more redundancy, which means there will be more substitute or alternate systems to use in an emergency if one or more major systems fail.

But this will create new problems. The weight in an Apollo is figured so closely that every pound added is a major worry. Add too many pounds and you create new hazards even more dangerous (and perhaps more likely to occur) than an oxygen tank explosion.

What happens when you add five or 10 pounds to strengthen an oxygen container, some more pounds to provide for an alternate cooling system and several more pounds to provide against other possible dangers?

These are not easy questions to solve. They will take time.

Feminists Eye Federal Contracts as Rights Tool

WASHINGTON (AP) - Women demanding an even shake with men at all levels of higher education are asking the federal government to close its multimillion-dollar contract purse to colleges and universities practicing sex discrimination.

A leader of a national women's equal education rights group, Bernice Sandler of Silver Spring, Md., has filed charges under terms of presidential executive orders forbidding government contractors to discriminate by sex.

"The orders never had been used this way in the past," Mrs. Sandler said in an interview, "but we were watching what the blacks were doing and we came across a footnote that the orders had been extended to include sex."

"We're getting the colleges and universities to look at sex discrimination by endangering their pocketbook," she added. "Throughout the university community," she said, "there is discrimination in hiring, promotion, getting tenure, and the like, and women make substantially less in salary than their male counterparts."

"The discrimination extends to all levels—faculty, staff and student body," she added. "It has been going on for years and women have been complaining bitterly among themselves."

Mrs. Sandler, 42, married and the mother of two teen-aged girls, is a lecturer at the University of Maryland and chairman of the Committee for Federal Contract Compliance in Education, part of the Women's Equity Action League.

Pope Relaxes Ban on Mixed Marriages

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI decreed Wednesday a relaxation of Roman Catholic law governing mixed religion marriages. But he upheld the Church's opposition to such marriages.

A 2,500-word papal letter allows local bishops to permit a mixed marriage to be performed without a priest. It lifts a requirement that the non-Catholic partner promise to allow the children to be reared in the Roman Catholic Church.

In another key passage, it states that a Catholic marrying a non-Catholic must promise "to do all in his power" to have children reared Catholics. This qualifying phrase did not exist in previous Church rules and recognizes problems that might be faced by the Catholic party.

Another of the 17 points in the document definitely lifts the excommunication of Catholics who marry outside the Church. This was contained in the Church's last major document on mixed marriages issued March 18, 1966. That document was drawn up by the Vatican Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, and did not carry the authority of Wednesday's papal decree.

Vatican officials described the new document as a "definite step" toward other religions for the sake of Christian unity. But they conceded that there could be no full agreement on the issue until unity of Christian churches was actually accomplished.

The Pope himself said in the document that "difficult questions" connected with mixed marriages "can only be fully resolved when Christianity is restored."

GOP Panel Says Hearn's Budget Estimates Shy

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — A task force of the Republican minority in the Missouri House says that anticipated revenues for the coming year, as figured by the Democratic administration, are about $28.3 million short.

Rep. A. Robert Pierce, R-Cape Girardeau, chairman of the group, said the governor's figures for budget purposes were based on those available last July. His group, on the other hand, had the benefit of nine months' of actual collections this fiscal year.

He said the group found the governor's estimate of $36.7 million in sales tax collections during the coming year were believed about $3.2 million short.

But the estimate of $174.4 million on income tax collections was about $16.1 million short.

Administration estimates on the revenue from other taxes were about right the task force said except for the cigarette tax which is earmarked for the schools. The administration of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes estimated that at $48 million for the coming year. The task force came up with a figure of $53.5 million.

Pierce said the task force expended about 200 man-hours in its work and said state agencies were helpful in the job.

Arctic terms make a round-trip migration each year of 20,000 to 22,000 miles. They nest from the Arctic Circle as far south as Massachusetts; in winter some are found even within the Ant-arctic Circle.

One of Three Surviving Indian Fighters Dies

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Thomas Ignatius Rebington Macauley, who rode with the U. S. Cavalry in the twilight years of its wars with the Indians of the American West, died Tuesday. He was 96.

Of the legions that fought the Sioux, the Arapahoe, the Cheyenne, the Apache and other tribes in the period 1871-98, only two now survive.

Macauley, a big, lusty man even near the end of his life, migrated from Ireland as a boy of 13. He enlisted in the cavalry at age 21 and served with Troop A of the 8th Cavalry out of Ft. Keogh, Mont., and Ft. Meade, S. D.

Macauley was not disposed to talk about his military service, which he described as "utterly undisturbed."

When he could be induced to reminisce, Macauley emphasized the monotony of the soldier's life.

Macauley reached the scene at a time when most of the bitter Indian fighting was in the past and the horse soldier could feel sympathy for the red man.

"We figured they had a raw deal from the government," he said.

Macauley was discharged from the Army in 1898. He settled in St. Louis and worked as a streetcar conductor, then in the railway mail service.

In 1966, Macauley was admitted to the Veterans Hospital for post-operative care. He never left the hospital.

Mrs. Isabel McCann, Macauley's godchild and daughter of a man he met on the sea voyage from Ireland to the United States, said she believes Macauley had no surviving relatives, aside from some distant kin in Ireland.

Burial was Thursday in Jefferson Barracks National Cemetery.

Spokesmen at Jefferson Barracks said the two surviving Indian fighters include a 96-year-old Chicago man and a 103-year old man last reported living in California.

Their names were not available.

Burlison Tells Of Postal Reform

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Tenth District United States Representative, Bill D. Burlison, spoke Tuesday night at the annual banquet of the Missouri Chapter of the National League of Postmasters.

He explained provisions of the postal reform agreement arrived at between the postal department and the postal unions, which terminated the postal strike.

Burlison emphasized that the legislation may still have a tortuous path. The bill must be approved in the House as well as the senate before it is ready for the president's signature. It is pending in the post office and civil service committee in the house.

The Congressman emphasized that postal employees would retain their civil service retirement rights, and that the veterans preference act and federal workmen's compensation law would continue to apply.

Burlison explained that the proposed legislation continues the strike prohibition, but provides for binding arbitration in the event that negotiations stalemate.

Burlison pointed out that he was much concerned about wholesale consolidation and elimination of rural routes, since he represents a rural constituency. He stated that he was pleased that the present bill provides that "no small post office shall be closed solely for operating at a deficit, it being the intent of the congress that effective postal service be insured to residents of both urban and rural communities."
